Peerless Cooking Stove,

Feerless Uooking Stove,

I LAIR what the Boston Joannal says of this samperor stricte:

Among the peculiar merits claimed for this stove is the complete remission and even temperature of the over, making it as rossiling rather than a baking over, which is seemed by a peculiarly constructed also changer, which heats the six set in passes flowed belief after the five pol and into the oven, causing the oven bolled the five pol and into the oven, causing the oven bolled at each of the control which can be explained by a five its consultance. This store works equally well with cual or word, there stove a work equally well with cual or word. There stoves are of different sizes, and are made plain or with an extension top, the initer being made with a large reservoir for hot water on the top and a warning close to mericant. POULTRY HISES FOR FUBRUARY.

BY C. A. DESOUS. No slock pays better for keeping than hens, and no person ought to keep them who cannot find time to give them proper attention. A large house is created in many cases, where pra-fowls, turkey and guinea blids occupy the same apartment with the common heas. It is only necessary, in such a road, to stand unobserved for a few minutes to be convened there can be no peace and prosperity in such a medicy of discord and confusion, setting askie the unhealthy influence of had air, generated by the breath of so many together. Posine your poultry gre well housed, with a good wit dow, with a southern aspect, as fowls love plenty of cheerful light. They will not lay and thrive in a dark, dirty house! You shoulk keep your hen houses clean and sprinkle line or ashes upon the flows. Sitting hens often, when allowed to sit so late, breed lice in their nests, and we have destroyed them by sprinkling powdered sulphur in the nests, and under the hens' whogs, and also among their wings. Take course com meal, into which a quantity of sulphur has been mixed with milk or water. Feed with this for several days; it may then be omitted for a few days, and repeated again at nitrovals of three or four days, and continued in this way until all the nits have been hatched, when the insects will drop out and leave the fowls. Thorough cleaninges after this will generally exterminate them. Their perches should be cleaned, when the house becomes infested with lice, and whitewashed, and a general cleaning and application of sulphur to nest hoxes will cause the vermin to disappear. Fowls are always poor and undiffy, and setting hear are seldom successful in batching their eggs, when annoyed with vermin. A little care is all that is necessary to prevent it.

To get eggs in winter, give them meat twice a week. Bay any kind of offal from the batchers, and they will thook you for it, and pay you will be supplied, by

Captain Mujne Relde

Captain Mayne (teid is now forty-eight years of age. He is a native of the north of Ireland, descended from one of the grantees of the Ulster plantations, and through his maternal parentage, from the royal Smart family of Scotland. He received a first class education at the Belfast College (Queen's University), and, being the son of a Presbyterian minister, at was proposed that he should follow a theological career. But the young Trishman's daring and enthusiastic character, his lanate love of adventure, and the promptings of his ardent and chivalrous nature, destined churchman's closet.

America, traveled through the West Indics and Mexico, and spent several years of adventurous life in the Far West. To those travels the world is indebted for the truthful and vigorous descriptions of forest and prairie scenery, of Indian and Mexican manners, and of thilling episodes in wood land life that are found in many of his works. After the rude but instructive experiences of those wluderings, he made his way to the Atlantic cities, and devoted himself for a time to magazine writing, especially poetry. But the Mexican War broke out to interrupt him at the threshold of his literary labors. The martial spirit was to much a part of his individuality to permit him to ignore that field of excitement. He entered the United States army as a lieutenant, and distinguished himself by several daring exploits, as recorded in the disputches of General Scott and other commanders under whom he served. He led the forlorn hope at the storming of Chapultepee, and also the last infantry charge at the baciends at Los Portales, which decided the battle of Cherubusco. Severely wounded at the former action, he was for some weeks reported among the killed, and the newspapers of the time did justice to his gallantry. The next news that reached the United States from Mexico was that Captain Reid, instead of being killed, had married a rich heiress-a report not more true than that of his death,

Returning from Mexico, Captala Reid was called upon to take command of the European refugees in New York, then planning an expedition to aid the revolution in Germany. Having hastily organized a Foreign Legion, he sailed for Europe. but arrived to find the fortress of Rastade invested by the Pressian army, and the revolution virtually at an end.

His next move was to join Kossuth in Hungary, but before he could arrive at the scene of strile, the Magyar patriot had been compelled to tice to Kutayah, in Turkey.

The general pacification of Europe left Captain Reid no further opportunity for using his sword, and returning to England, he took up the pen, and produced in rapid succession those works of wondrous interest which have been the delight of millions, and have been translated into every European language. It is said that his first work, the "Scalp Hunters," has in England alone circulated over one million copies, and all this without the aid of any frieudle criticism. On the contrary, at an early period of his literary career, by defending Kossuth against the attacks of the Times newspaper, he gained the undying hostility of that powerful journal, and the whole clique of London reviewers secretly controlled by its influence. 'The system pursued by them has been either to treat his works with siteuce, or pronounce upon them as being more "books for boys," whereas, such splendid romances us the "War Trail," the "Quadroon," the "White Chief," the "Headless Horseman," and half a score of others, have no relation whatever to boys' literature; and by these, and not by his boy's books of adventure, must Captain Reid's literary character be-

In the year 1854, Captain Reld was married to a young English lady of the Clarendon family, a lineal descendant of Edward Hyde Earl of Cintendon, and Lord High Chancellor of England. Since then he has resided in the county of Bucks, England. During our late war he proved himself our warmest friend, gaining a targe measure of unpopularity by his advocacy of the repub-

The President replied to this address as

"Mr. Thornton. -- Your Queen enjoys more highly than any other sovereign the respect and sympathy of the American peo-ple. The people of the United States well believe that she is entirely sincere in the kindly message which, under her command you have delivered to me, and this belief will encoorage them to hope for a speedy and amicable adjustment of matters in difference between her Majesty's govern-ment and the government of the United Your late predecessor, Sir Frederic Bruce, without any disobedience to instructions or any want of regard to British Interests, won the respect and esteem of this government and nation. Sir Frekerie's sudden death revealed to ourselves the fact that the friend ship we cherished for him had even acquired the intensity of fraternal affection. It will be a pleasing duty for me to extend to you the same consideration and confidence which he so eminently enjoyed. In regard to the political relations of the United States and Great Britain only one thing seems to be necessary, which is, that the statesmen and people of the two countries may carefully and constantly study to con-form their measures to the political logic which in every region where the English language Is spoken so distincly manifests itself in increasing love of a constitutional freedom and the rapid march of a common, irresistible and indivisible civilization."

[For the Daily News] To the Empors of Daily News:

I noticed in your issue of Saturday that ron spoke of Gen. Grant as a prominent cardidate for the Presidency, 'without it any way alluding to the prominence already attained (through the spontaneous acclama tion of the people) of Col. Dan Rice, whose claims are already especsed by no less than seventy one papers published in different sections of the United States.

Col Dan Rice has won a proud distinction during his successful career. He has visited all parts of the country, everywhere drawing growds to winces his wonderful performance and manly bearing. In this way he has uttained to a wide popularity. and it is but fair to state he has also secured an ample fortune-the result of enterprise, saying and a just appreciation of the wants of the people who now call him to the exconfive chair. Overtures have been made $1.55; Glass Tumblers at a cents each; Heavy Olass to him by the leading politicians of the country and he could have the nomination of the Democratic party if he would come down with the ready to secure it; but he scorns advances acide to him in this way, choosing inflier to remain in the quiet enjoyment of his princely fortune than to gain distinction by so have a course. He seeks no office, but, at the same time, as a good citizen, he feels that if the highest office in the land should be thrust upon him by the acclausation of the people, he would have no right to decline it. In that case, like Cincinnatus of old, he would leave the retirement in which be had hoped to spend the rest of his days, and go forth to the Capitol to straighten the affairs of the nation and relieve the country from the anxiety, turnoil and strife which are distracting it under the present administration.
